

Welcome AnnMarie Gorham, Nurse Practitioner!

We are pleased to announce that Ann Marie ("Re") Gorham, RN, MSN, RNC, NP-C has joined our practice as a Nurse Practitioner, providing routine gynecologic care in our Springfield office.

Re received her Bachelor of Arts degree from Barnard College and went on to Yale University for her Master's degree in nursing and nurse practitioner certificate. She joins BOGG with years of diverse experience in healthcare, ranging from young adult medicine, medical research, chronic care, rehabilitation, and healthcare administration.

After many years of experience as a Nurse Practitioner in settings ranging from community health clinics and private practice, Re is looking forward to returning to her interest in women's healthcare. "The opportunity to practice in an ob/gyn setting had been my goal since becoming a Nurse Practitioner. Focusing on each woman's real-life circumstances including her social, family, and medical history helps me to create a dialog with each patient...that dialog is fundamental to engage patients in their healthcare and to empower them to be proactive about prevention and treatment." Re finds it particularly fulfilling to provide care to young women as they begin to access reproductive care during an important period in their lives, when they are developing lifelong health habits. Supporting health across a woman's development through all stages of life remains the core of Re's practice.

Dr. Howard Trietsch, managing physician of Baystate Ob/Gyn Group commented that "We are looking forward to welcoming Re to our practice in January. Joining our two nurse practitioners on staff, Re's addition will provide our patients with an important option in their care. Fundamental to their training, Nurse Practitioners focus on providing care for the 'whole woman' in the context of her lifestyle, incorporating the important elements of education and wellness. Re's skillful training at Yale along with her years of medical experience and bright demeanor will prove to be an excellent fit for many of our patients. We are pleased to welcome Re to our team."

Find Us On Facebook!

We are excited to announce that we have joined Facebook! Along with our robust website at BOGG.com, our Facebook presence will allow us to communicate with you about important news, events, and announcements, including any weather related delay or closing information for our practice. To stay in touch with us, go to www.facebook.com/BaystateObGynGroup and "like" our page!

Teen Health Resources, Online!

The teenage years are filled with significant and exciting changes for adolescents—maintaining good health habits during these years gives teens a solid foundation for a long term health and wellness. We invite you to explore the section devoted to teens on our website at www.bogg.com where you will find a wealth of resources including information about your first visit with our practice, practitioners choices that fit your needs, information about STDs, sex, and birth control, frequently asked questions, and a comprehensive "link library" targeted for teens. We encourage all young women to make informed decisions about their health and lifestyle. Log on today!